THINK ABOUT THIS:

Undeclared is a three-week series designed to help us remember and celebrate all that Jesus defeated for us at Easter. Because parts of the Easter narrative are abstract, difficult to understand, and even hard to believe, it’s important to break down for middle school students what the things they’ve heard about Easter—things like the crucifixion and resurrection—mean for their lives today. And that’s exactly what this series does!

 DO THIS:

MORNING TIME

Take time to read one (or more!) of the Easter accounts in the Bible. Look at the story from Matthew, Mark, Luke, or John together as a family and talk about what it makes you think about, what questions you might have, and what it means for you today.

MEAL TIME

Create a new Easter tradition for your family by hosting a family cook-off! Have each member of your family make a dish to serve one night this week. At the end of the week, have your family vote to decide the best dish and name that person the undefeated champion of the Easter cook-off... until next year, anyway!

DRIVE TIME

We've all experienced a defeat of some kind in our lives. Take time this week to share one of your biggest defeats with your kid. Talk about how you felt in the moment and what encouraged you to keep going even when you felt lost or defeated.

BED TIME

Have some fun by creating a little healthy competition in your family. Schedule a game night this week, allowing each person in your family to pick their favorite game to be played that night.
